PARENTING TIP OF THE WEEK

Driving Miss Tween

Tweens often assume their parents will drive them to any movie theater, shopping mall or birthday party they want to attend. Naturally, I didn't mind driving my daughter to a school event or youth group meeting, but she needed to know I was not at her beck and call.

We set up some ground rules. If it took me 15 minutes to drive to the mall, she needed to spend 15 minutes vacuuming the car, walking the dog or doing another chore. She quickly gained an appreciation for my time and no longer saw me as her personal chauffeur.
